The title track, an Arthur Grant composition, was listed as one of the top fifty best. Automatic frequency control (AFC) systems are used in various systems such as cellular mobile radio systems and satellite link systems to provide relatively constant modulation index in the power amplifier of a radio frequency (RF) transmitter. FIG. 1 shows a conventional AFC system 100 which includes an AFC signal generator 101, a transmitter filter 103, an output power detector and a controller unit 105. The AFC signal generator 101 generates a control voltage in response to a modulation signal Vmod such that the control voltage controls the modulation index of an RF signal output from the transmitter filter 103. The output power detector measures
